Special Educational Needs & Disability (SEND) reform

Consultation paper on the proposed model and arrangements for the delivery of SEND reform in Bath and North East Somerset
1 About SEND reform

1.1 What is SEND reform?

Drivers for change

Changes to the law

Principles of SEND reform

1.2 What are we required to do?

Joint commissioning

Early support

SEN support in education settings

Education, Health & Care (EHC) planning

The local offer

Personal budgets

1.3 What are we doing to prepare for SEND reform in Bath and North East Somerset?

Engagement and communication

Workforce development

Integrated assessment and planning

Joint commissioning and personal budgets

The local offer

2 Current position in B&NES and learning from the pathfinders

2.1 Current local context

Current SEND partnership and delivery arrangements in B&NES
Other relevant service developments and issues arising from SEND reform ..................................................................................................................13

2.2 Pathfinder learning .................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................14

3 Proposed model for delivering SEND reform in B&NES ..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................18

3.1 Principles ..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................18

Culture change – a new way of working..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................18

A continuum of needs and support..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................19

The model to support delivery of SEN support and EHC planning..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................21

3.2 Early identification and SEN support..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................21

Early support..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................21

SEN support at school age ..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................22

Person centred thinking ..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................23

Assessment ..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................23

Team around the child/young person..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................23

Lead professional..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................23

Support planning..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................24

3.3 Education, health and care planning..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................25

Request for statutory assessment ..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................25

Statutory assessment ..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................26

Education, health and care (EHC) plans ..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................26

Reviewing & updating EHC plans ..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................27

Decision-making ..................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................................28
Personal budgets .................................................................................................................28
Quality assurance ..................................................................................................................28
Preparation for adulthood......................................................................................................29
Transition arrangements for conversion of statements of SEN to EHC plans ..................30

3.4 Capacity and service delivery ..........................................................................................30
The SEND lead practitioner role ..........................................................................................30
Team work and lead roles in EHC planning ...........................................................................31
Service integration ..................................................................................................................33
Competencies for SEN support and working with EHC plans ...........................................37

3.4 Partnership arrangements .................................................................................................39
Independent information, advice and support ......................................................................39
Local offer framework, on-going review ................................................................................40
Partnership, governance, strategy ........................................................................................40

Process, timeline, next steps, comments ..............................................................................41

Links and references .............................................................................................................42
Local links ...............................................................................................................................42
National links – SEND reform delivery partners ..................................................................42

Appendices .............................................................................................................................43
Draft support plan ....................................................................................................................43
Draft EHC plan ........................................................................................................................43
Local offer template ...............................................................................................................43
SEND reform – consultation paper

1 About SEND reform
1.1 What is SEND reform?

Special Educational Needs and Disability (SEND) reform is a national programme to transform support for disabled children and young people up to 25 and those with special educational needs (SEN) placing aspiration and personalisation at the heart of the system.

Drivers for change

The following national drivers for change are drawn from government documents relating to SEND reform – they do not necessarily all apply fully in Bath & North East Somerset (B&NES).

- Expectations of what young people can achieve are often too low
- Children’s support needs are too often identified late and families are forced to negotiate each bit of their support
- Parents find the current system of support bureaucratic, bewildering and adversarial
- Young people and their families experience little choice and control over the support they receive
- Young people with SEN do less well than their peers at school and college – higher levels of absence from school, higher levels of exclusions, lower levels of attainment
- Young people with SEN are more likely not to be in education, employment or training (NEET)
- Employment outcomes for disabled people and those with SEN are poor
- Supporting independence including employment improves outcomes and saves money on supporting adults with learning difficulties.

Changes to the law

In response to these issues the 2011 green paper ‘Support and Aspiration’ set out a vision for transformation of the system of support. The proposed legal framework for reform was set out in the Children and Families Bill 2013 and an early indicative draft code of practice for SEN in March 2013, which was followed by a more detailed draft code of practice in October 2013. A pathfinder programme in 20 local areas involving 30 local authorities and their partners has been developing and testing elements of the reform and has informed the support for non-pathfinder authorities as well as refinements to the proposed framework.

The bill has now become the Children & Families Act 2014 which gained royal assent in February 2014. The new legal framework comes into force from 1st Sept 2014. A revised draft code of practice was published on 16th April which takes account of changes made by Parliament to the legislation and gives greater clarity and detail than the previous draft. The final code of practice is anticipated in June 2014.

Principles of SEND reform

The aims of SEND reform were set out in the green paper. The vision is to transform support for children and young people with SEN and disabilities based on the following principles –

- High expectations and aspirations for what young people can achieve, including employment and independent living
- The aspirations of young people and their parent carers are central to everything we do
- Early identification of needs, and integrated early help
- Integrated assessment and planning 0-25, focused on long term outcomes, bringing together education, health and care support
- High quality provision organised with clear pathways and providing choice and control to families
- Excellent outcomes achieved through the knowledge, skills and attitude of everyone working with children and young people.

1.2 What are we required to do?

What follows is a brief outline of the key duties for local authorities, clinical commissioning groups and education settings arising from the Act and new code of practice. For more detail readers are encouraged to follow the links given towards the end of this paper to the original documents and to a range of further information available online about the reform.
Joint commissioning

The Local Authority (LA) will have a duty to promote integration of special educational provision, health and social care provision for disabled children and young people up to 25 and those with SEN where this would promote their well-being and improve the quality of provision. The Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) and other partners must cooperate. The LA and CCG must jointly commission all provision needed across education, health and social care to support this group of children and young people.

The CCG must ensure there is a designated medical officer for SEN, with roles set out in detail in the draft code of practice.

We must ensure that these arrangements are linked to the Joint Strategic Needs Assessment (JSNA) and Health and Wellbeing Strategy. There must be robust arrangements to underpin the partnership for SEND and for accountability to councillors and senior commissioners.

Early support

Health services will have a duty to identify disability or emerging SEN in early years and to work with families and the local authority to address those needs. There are new duties on early years settings and on the local authority to ensure joined up early support for disabled children and those with SEN before they get to school and through the transition to school.

SEN support in education settings

The new legal framework introduces the concept of graduated SEN support to replace the current categories of school action and school action plus. There are extended and strengthened duties on early years settings, schools and further education settings to identify SEN and provide support, working cooperatively with local authorities and health services and in partnership with parents and young people.

Education, Health & Care (EHC) planning

Statements of SEN are to be replaced with a single education, health and care (EHC) plan, which must include the health and social care provision related to young people’s SEN and may include other health and care provision to form a single holistic plan. for the child or young person. The current bureaucratic system for statutory assessments and drawing up statements of SEN is to be replaced with a more person centred, holistic, outcome focused process.

Assessments must be carried out in a coordinated way, reducing duplication and repetition for families. This will bring together education, health, children’s and adult care services working to produce a single plan for each child or young person with SEN aged 0-25. EHC plans will offer the same protections as statements do now, naming a school and providing additional resources based on needs. Plans will be reviewed at least annually in a person-centred way, i.e. with the child or young person at the centre and fully involving both the young person and their parent carers in reviewing the plan.

Parent carers and young people will be entitled to independent support with the EHC planning process and will have access to dispute resolution/mediation mechanisms and rights of appeal as at present to the SENDIST tribunal.

The local offer

The local authority is required to publish a local offer setting its arrangements for supporting disabled young people and those with SEN aged 0-25, setting out the services available and linking to information about education settings. Early years settings, schools and further education providers will be required to publish information about their arrangements to support SEN. Parent carers and young people must be fully involved in co-producing the local offer, reviewing and improving it over time.

Personal budgets

There will be an option for personal budgets for support elements of the plan, but not the funding for a school or college place. This is intended to give parent carers and young people more choice and control over how their plan is delivered.

1.3 What are we doing to prepare for SEND reform in Bath and North East Somerset?

A project was launched in September 2013 to prepare to implement SEND reform in B&NES. Briefings on the reform have been provided to the Health and Wellbeing Board, Children’s Trust Board, the relevant B&NES Council Policy Development and Scrutiny Panels and the Joint Commissioning Leadership Team (joint senior leaders of the CCG and People & Community Services).
Work has been organised under the following headings with working groups bringing together managers and practitioners from across education, health, children’s and adult care services, education settings including schools and colleges, the voluntary and community sector and most importantly parent carers.

Engagement and communication

Parent carers have been involved in all of the project workstreams and engagement supported by Parent Carers Aiming High, the recognised parent carer forum in B&NES, and the Parent Partnership Service which supports parents of young people with SEN. A task group has been working to engage disabled young people and those with SEN in the work. We have also sought to involve early years settings, schools and further education providers, statutory services and the voluntary and community sector in the work. A webpage and Facebook page have been set up to publish working documents and updates and to facilitate engagement by the public.

Workforce development

Training is being planned for delivery from May to December 2014 to introduce the new legal framework and new ways of working. We are also working on longer term training programmes on person centred thinking, outcome focused planning, and to embed the SEND reform in our integrated working training programme.

Integrated assessment and planning

We are learning from the work of the pathfinders and building on existing local good practice to design and test the best way to achieve person-centred EHC plans. This way of working is being piloted for some statutory assessments and also some annual reviews to convert statements of SEN into EHC plans. A draft SEN support plan has been developed as a possible tool for joined-up planning of SEN support for young people who do not meet the threshold for an EHC plan.

Joint commissioning and personal budgets

We already have a pooled budget in B&NES for a small number of children with very complex needs. We can learn from this in looking at how decision-making and budget allocation need to work to support EHC plans. We should build on experience with personal budgets in adult care to introduce this option for EHC plans. Personal budgets, together with the local offer, are intended to enable parent carers and young people to have more choice and control over how support is provided. Work is underway to develop an initial personal budget offer for Sept 2014, and to set out a programme of development over 2-3 years to extend the scope and integration of this offer.

The local offer

We have developed a template for our local offer, based on pathfinder experience. This is currently being tested with a range of schools, settings and services, and will be used to structure service listings as well as the area-wide local offer, setting out how we support disabled young people and those with SEN in B&NES.

This consultation paper sets out the proposed model and arrangements for delivering SEND reform in B&NES, and the consultation on this paper will inform the B&NES local offer to be set out in September 2014. This initial local offer comes out of work with many parent carers and partners and some young people, and we hope this consultation process will engage a wider range of stakeholders. However the resulting local offer will not have been fully co-produced with parent carers and young people. It is proposed we set out a 3-5 year strategy for SEND to ensure we move to full co-production of our local offer with parent carers, young people and other key partners over this period.

2 Current position in B&NES and learning from the pathfinders

2.1 Current local context

Current SEND partnership and delivery arrangements in B&NES

The project work on SEND reform implementation has built on previous work through the Strategic Transition Board (STB) on transitions to adulthood and the Disabled Children’s Strategy, coordinated by the Disabled Children’s Strategy Group (DCSG). The latter group has led work on the EHC planning framework and both groups have formed a basis for building on existing joint working arrangements between services, with the DCSG also having established partnership arrangements with parent carers of disabled young people.
In implementing the requirements for early identification and SEN support we can build on existing local good practice set out in the B&NES Early Help Offer. Increasing numbers of children’s needs for early help are assessed holistically through the common assessment framework (CAF) and needs then met through coordinated ‘team around the child/young person/family’ (TAC/TAF) arrangements and coordinated by a lead professional. There are well established arrangements to support early years settings in meeting SEN through the work of LA employed area SENCOs who work with early years settings, and high needs transition support for children moving from early years into school who look likely to require the support of a statement of SEN once in school.

There are 700-750 school age children in B&NES with statements of SEN who will need EHC plans, and over 3000 school age children identified by schools at the current school action or school action plus levels of need. However it is likely based on national prevalence data that 18-20% of all children and young people in B&NES have some level of SEN, most of whom are supported in early years settings, schools, colleges and other universal and targeted services with specialist input when needed. This translates to over 6000 young people aged 0-18 in total.

The current legal requirement for statutory assessments and statements of SEN is met through a statutory SEN team with 2.4 full time equivalent (fte) SEN case officers and additional case officer time from a senior case officer and 14-19 placement officer resulting in 3.4 fte case officer time, or a caseload of around 200 statements of SEN per fte case officer. The statutory assessment process in line with the current legal framework and practice in other LAs is an office and paper-based process with little face to face engagement with families, schools or other services. Despite this the current SEN system operates effectively in B&NES with most assessments completed within the current 26 weeks’ timescale and good engagement with schools and parents to achieve good quality statements. There have been no appeals by parents to the SENDIST tribunal for three years, which is a good measure of the effectiveness of engagement with parents within the constraints of the current system and capacity of the service.

Schools identify SEN at lower levels and coordinate support through Individual Education Plans (IEPs). Schools bring in outside help including health and social care for children with higher levels of SEN, currently defined as school action plus. Once young people meet the statutory threshold and have a statement of SEN, schools lead on annual reviews of statements.

Young people with statements of SEN and their parents appear happy with the support they receive for the most part. Feedback from families and schools in B&NES suggests the current system works least well for those young people at school action plus – i.e. the highest level of SEN below the threshold for specialist/statutory SEN support through a statement.
In preparation for adulthood again we can build on existing local good practice. Person-centred approaches are already used in adult services and in transition reviews for many young people with statements of SEN. These approaches will now be embedded in EHC planning for children and young people at all ages. The existing preparation for adulthood pathways and guide will form a good starting point for the local offer for young people 14-25. Existing networks involving the FE sector in B&NES have been used to work with this sector and other partners to develop our shared understanding of how EHC planning and the local offer will work for this age group.

Other relevant service developments and issues arising from SEND reform

There are significant changes to come in early years services in B&NES due to the need to make budget reductions. There will be a consultation process on proposals for change in early years which will start and end later than the consultation period for the proposals for SEND reform set out in this paper. There are therefore elements of the proposals in this paper relating to early support for SEND that will need to continue to form part of that consultation in order to arrive at the optimal resolution. Regardless of which functions eventually sit within the SEN Team or a SEND service and which sit within the early years services there will be a need for close joint working between the two services to ensure coherent early identification of disabled children and emerging SEN alongside support to other vulnerable children and their families. We must ensure that there is good enough early support for SEND (both for children and their parents) if we are to avoid a significant increase in EHC plans for children in early years who can be effectively and appropriately supported without one.

There are also significant changes underway with the Connexions Service having been significantly reduced and coming into B&NES Council from 1st April 2014. The Connexions Service is currently commissioned to provide the Learning Difficulty Assessments for young people with SEN in transition to adulthood. The Learning Difficulty Assessment becomes part of the legal framework for EHC planning from 1st Sept 2014. It has therefore been agreed that funding for one Connexions PA post will be transferred into the SEN Team to ensure there is capacity to incorporate that function into EHC planning from that date. Again the SEN Team or a SEND service and the merged Connexions and Youth Services will need to work closely together to support disabled young people and those with SEN who are at risk of being not in education, employment or training (NEET) or otherwise qualify for the targeted support provided by those services.

The pathway for children with emotional well-being, behaviour & mental health issues overlaps significantly with that for SEN and disability. The revised draft code of practice for SEND amends the categories of SEN to exclude ‘behaviour’ from the definition of SEN. The relevant category is now proposed to relate to ‘social, emotional and mental health difficulties’. This properly recognises that behavioural issues can be indicative of a whole range of underlying needs, not confined to SEN, and/or weaknesses in curriculum or service delivery. This change will require some work to review how these pathways interact and how we ensure that children are appropriately supported with behaviour difficulties regardless of whether they are also disabled and/or have SEN.

2.2 Pathfinder learning

Our regional pathfinder champion is Wiltshire, and there has been good support from Wiltshire to share learning from their own work and that of other pathfinders, including Southampton in particular. Pathfinder learning has also come through the support of other Government delivery partners for SEND reform.

The pathfinder programme nationally and regionally is not yet complete and there is much still to learn about how EHC planning will work in detail. While the local project work has built on pathfinder learning therefore we have also had to move rapidly into developing our own learning about how the reform will best work in B&NES.

In developing a framework for our local offer we have built on the work of the SE7 pathfinder who have developed a template for the local offer with input from thousands of parent carers across the south east of England. This has been a good starting point for our work locally. We have been working with schools, young people and other settings and services to develop the template and our understanding of how this will work in practice.

Our draft EHC planning template has been based on work in the Hartlepool and Doncaster pathfinder, incorporating learning from Wiltshire and our own local experience. This will require further development in light of our pilot experience and the April 2014 revised draft code of practice.

We have also based our model process for statutory assessment and EHC planning on the pathfinder experience. The process we are piloting is very much a model to be personalised to the individual circumstances of each young person, their family, the education settings and services involved with them at the time the statutory assessment is undertaken. However what is clear from the both the pathfinder experience and our own piloting is that a personalised face to face process simply takes more staff time than the current system. The Government have accepted this learning from the pathfinders, announced an implementation grant for year 1 (2014-15) and indicated they recognise the 'new burden' the reform creates on local authorities signalling a further announcement soon about how this will be supported.

Pathfinders have identified two models for delivering EHC assessments and planning. These are set out in the diagram that follows. One is centrally led throughout; with the SEN case officer role developed into a role which leads the assessment and planning process and then takes on the lead professional role to coordinate EHC plans and reviews. The other model is completely dispersed with lead working functions distributed around all of the services including schools that make up the team around each young person.

Model 1 – centralised lead working – has the advantages of retaining full control over the quality of assessment, EHC planning, delivery and review. However it has the twin disadvantages of the cost of creating and sustaining sufficient centralised capacity to work in this way and of undermining team and lead (integrated) working approaches on the ground.

Model 2 – dispersed lead working – has the advantage of building integrated working approaches across the whole workforce, supporting the creation of individual teams around each young person, and promotes inclusion – the principle that aspiration and support for disabled young people and those with SEN is everybody’s business. However it would take a lot longer than we have to develop the whole workforce to the point that this could be achieved without a serious reduction in the quality and consistency of EHC plans compared to the current statements, with a significant risk of variability in the quality of support provided to young people and of a consequent increase in potentially costly appeals to the SENDIST tribunal.

The diagram therefore indicates a preference in B&NES for a hybrid model which builds on

- existing local work to develop integrated – team and lead – working practices across the children’s workforce, our schools and settings
- the high standard achieved by the SEN Team currently in the quality and timeliness of assessments, engagement with schools and parents and the resulting statements of SEN
- the commitment to and enthusiasm for the principles of the reform that is evident through the work of the implementation project so far, across the workforce: in our early years services and sector, schools, the FE sector, children’s and adults social care and health services, the voluntary and community sector and above all those parent carers and young people who have become involved in the work.
The next section of this paper outlines proposals for establishing and developing this model for delivering SEND reform in B&NES. This also takes into account other aspects of the learning from pathfinders including –

- the central importance and the depth of the culture change required to make the SEND reform work – this is not about introducing a new form of paperwork for describing how a young person’s needs will be met – it is about bringing person-centred thinking into our work with disabled young people, those with SEN and their families – and endeavouring to work in equal partnership with young people and their families
- the importance of working towards an equal partnership with parent carers in developing the local offer and framework for delivering SEND reform – true co-production
- the need to support young people to become partners also at both individual and strategic level – again working towards true co-production with young people
- the importance of a partnership with education settings based on mutual honesty, trust and respect
- the potential benefits of integrating and collocating statutory services that wholly or primarily support disabled children and young people and those with SEN.

This is just an outline of some of the key learning from the work of the pathfinders. For more detail readers are encouraged to follow the relevant links towards the end of this paper.
MODELS FOR DELIVERING EHC PLANNING

MODEL 1

Centralised

Central SEN team conducts statutory assessment, acts as Lead Professional for all EHC plans & plays major role in all reviews

MODEL 2

Dispersed

Coordinating roles in statutory assessment, EHC planning & review are completely distributed around the team around each child/young person with minimal central support

PROPOSED BANES MODEL

Hybrid

Central SEN team coordinates statutory assessment and plays major role in key stage transition reviews

Team around the child/young person/settings/schools provide Lead Professional for EHC plan delivery and lead annual reviews
3 Proposed model for delivering SEND reform in B&NES

3.1 Principles

Culture change – a new way of working

SEND reform requires a culture change across all of our education settings and services for disabled young people and those with SEN. This is best described through the following set of principles:

Principles for supporting disabled children and young people and those with special educational needs

ASPIRATION

for all of our young people regardless of disability or needs

- having high expectations
- supporting young people to achieve their full potential
- enabling young people to grow up to live meaningful and fulfilled lives

CO-PRODUCTION

full involvement of parent carers and young people

- at every stage of assessment, planning and review of the support they need to achieve their aspirations
- in design and improvement of the way we provide support and services
- in reviewing and developing our local offer

PERSON-CENTRED

putting children, young people and their families at the centre of everything we do
• using practices, skills and tools that focus on young people, their strengths, gifts and skills, what is important to them and the best way to support them
• listening to young people and their families and their desired outcomes now and for the future planning focused on outcomes – what difference will it make?

OUTCOME FOCUSED
• agreeing long and short term outcomes with young people, their families and the whole of their support team
• support plans to be clearly based on desired outcomes

HOLISTIC TEAM WORK
support based on a holistic understanding of the young person and all of their needs
• a single support plan for the young person to which everyone subscribes
• team work and coordination to ensure an integrated approach.

A continuum of needs and support
There is a continuum of needs from children and young people with no additional needs through to those with the most complex needs. SEND reform requires a graduated response for young people at each level of needs, through SEN support from universal and targeted services including education settings through to the specialist support required by those with the most complex needs, which is organised through EHC plans.

The following diagram shows how the existing framework for understanding the continuum of needs in B&NES applies to special educational needs and disability.
Early Help Model

Consider early common assessment

Level 1 *
Universal services
Children and young people’s needs met

Level 2 *
Additional needs
Single agency plan
No lead professional required
OR
Multi-agency support
Assessment and lead professional required

Level 3 *
High or complex needs
Multi-agency plan
Lead professional required

Level 4 *
Acute or complex needs
Risk of significant harm
Lead professional already required under statute or best practice guidelines

Common assessment framework sits here

Assess eligibility for statutory assessment e.g. social care, mental health

Child or young person at the centre

Assess, consult and act if risk of significant harm suspected

SEND reform in B&NES - consultation paper
The model to support delivery of SEN support and EHC planning

As stated above the model proposed is a hybrid of the models tested in pathfinders, which is judged to be most suitable to our local circumstances.

The local authority SEN team will lead on statutory assessment and EHC planning and play a major role in key stage transition reviews. A key aspect of EHC planning will be to build on and clarify the team around the child/young person arrangements including identification of the lead professional for coordinating delivery of the EHC plan. The lead professional will often but not always most appropriately be someone in the young person’s education setting, whether the class teacher or tutor or a key worker/teaching assistant working closely with the young person.

As in the current SEN framework education settings will usually be responsible for leading the annual review process. When a young person has multiple health and/or social care services, the EHC plan will need to reflect this complexity, and the lead professional may sometimes be another professional e.g. a social worker. When the lead professional is not someone in the education setting, the lead professional and the key person in the education settings will need to work closely together to plan the review process and ensure all aspect of the plan are reviewed in accordance with all of the relevant legal frameworks, while maintaining the integrity of the plan, the coherence of the team, and the centrality of the young person and their parent carers.

However the majority of disabled children and those with SEN do not require a statement of SEN now and will not require an EHC plan in the future. The model and arrangements for delivering EHC planning are therefore dependent on robust arrangements for early identification and SEN/disability support at all stages of a young person’s journey.

3.2 Early identification and SEN support

Early support

Work is underway to develop pathways for disabled children and those with emerging special educational needs in the early years. Health professionals will identify support needs age 0-2 and work with early years services to plan support including support for transitions into early years settings Early years services including area SENCOs will continue to support early years settings as now to identify and meet the needs of children with SEN.

Integrated working practices including team around the child, common assessment framework (CAF) and lead professional coordination will ensure joined up support and planning for transitions into early years settings and from there into school. The progress check at age 2 and Early Years Foundation Stage Profile at 5 will inform the assessment of needs and support planning at each stage. Funded places in settings will be available at age 2 on the basis of DLA entitlement or an EHC plan. - for the majority of those at this level of needs this will be on the basis of DLA. Additional support for children in early years settings and high needs transition support u= into school will continue to be provided as now regardless of whether a child has an EHC plan or not.

Timely statutory assessments will be carried out for those children who will need the support of an EHC plan in early years and in particular for transition to school. Our proposed SEN support plan could be helpful as a way to bring together all of the support for disabled children and those with SEN in early years into a single joined up plan. Support should be provided working to Early Support principles (http://www.ncb.org.uk/early-support for more information), which are consistent with the principles of SEND reform and a good preparation for the way SEN support will work in school and beyond.

SEN support at school age

The majority of children and young people with special educational needs (SEN) and or disabled children and young people will never reach the level of need to require a statutory single Education, Health and Care plan. Education settings and other services working with them have statutory duties to identify their needs including special educational needs and to make provision to meet those needs.

All children and young people with additional needs including SEN will benefit from an aspirational, person-centred and integrated approach. These approaches will not only benefit the child or young person and their family directly but will also provide a good starting point and build up a body of evidence if a statutory assessment becomes necessary at a later stage.

Early years settings, schools, colleges and other education providers and services working with them to support children and young people with SEND are therefore strongly encouraged to use the following approaches:
Person centred thinking

The one page profile can be completed by a child or young person with suitable adult support. There are tools to support this work both in early years and in preparation for adulthood from 14. This can then be used to inform assessment of needs and planning to meet those needs to make these processes more child/young person centred.

The family profile can be completed by a child or young person’s parent carers with support from a suitable person in learning places or other services as needed. Again this can then inform assessment and planning to make these processes more family centred.

Assessment

The Common Assessment Framework (CAF) should be used to carry out a holistic child-centred assessment bringing all practitioners and the family together to form a common view of the child’s needs. This will draw on any existing assessments including the learning setting’s assessment of the child’s special educational needs.

The CAF is an early help assessment, and is suitable as a tool when assessing the needs of a child who requires SEN support.

The social care single assessment also provides a basis for pulling together a holistic assessment of a child’s needs, and for a child needing SEN support this assessment must pull together all of the needs including any special educational needs in order to inform a holistic support plan for the child.

Team around the child/young person

The team around the child brings together a range of different practitioners from across the children, young people’s and adults workforces to support an individual child or young person and their family. The members of the team around the child develop and deliver a package of solution focused support to meet the needs identified through the common assessment.

Lead professional

The lead professional is identified from the team around the child to
• Act as a single point of contact for the child/young person and family
• Coordinate delivery of the actions agreed in the child’s support plan following assessment
• Reduce overlap and inconsistency in the services received.

The lead professional is accountable to their home agency for delivery of their lead professional role. They are not responsible or accountable for the actions of other practitioners or services.

Support planning

A support plan should be drawn up. Ideally this should be a single holistic child-centred plan to meet all of the child’s needs including any special educational needs following CAF or social care single assessment. This should be drawn up by the team around the child including the parent(s) and involving the child/young person in a way suitable to their age and understanding. Person-centred working tools should be used to support the child and family participation in this process.

The lead professional will coordinate delivery of the plan and ensure regular reviews as appropriate the needs and stage of development of the young person.

Support planning is currently carried out through a range of frameworks, including Individual Education Plans and Pastoral Support Plans in schools, the planning grid included in the CAF format, social care child in need plans and health support plans amongst others. We have seen good quality plans formulated and delivered for young people using all of these frameworks.

However, for disabled children and young people and those with SEN we propose a SEND support plan (draft proposed format attached to this paper as an appendix). This provides a person centred, holistic, outcome focused model for a single support plan for a child or young person. This could be of particular benefit in the following circumstances –

• As an early support plan for a disabled child or where there are emerging SEN – this could follow a CAF or social care assessment and be a shared plan for the whole of the team around the child including early years setting, health and social care services
• To support transitions for children/young people with SEN - between early years settings and school, between schools, and from school into FE
• As a single SEN support plan for young people in an education setting when there is significant health and/or care input (those at school action plus in the current system), to bring together the school’s plans, health support plan and child in need plan into a single shared plan. In this case it would also be a good preparation for statutory assessment leading to an EHC plan when required
• As a single SEN support plan following a statutory assessment, when an EHC plan is not required – this could be more helpful than the ‘note in lieu’ of a statement issued in the current system
• As a single support plan for a disabled young person who does not have SEN bringing together health support plan, social care plan and any support plans used in school into a single shared plan
• As a single support plan for a young person with a statement that has not yet been converted to an EHC plan.

3.3 Education, health and care planning

Request for statutory assessment

The revised draft code of practice sets out the requirements including the evidence needed to request a statutory assessment of SEN. The tools used in the provision of early help including SEN support will assist in providing the evidence needed.

Statutory assessment will be available to any child or young person with SEN from 0-25 who meets the criteria. Applications will be considered by the SEND panel, which will have members from education, health and care services.

The threshold for a statutory assessment will not change from that currently in place for a statutory assessment leading to a statement of SEN. In the early years (before school age) this is likely to be for those children who look likely to require specialist support whether within mainstream settings or in a special school.

At 16+ this is likely to be for those young people who currently receive support through a Learning Difficulty Assessment either because they already have a statement or because they are likely to need specialist support to access learning in further education.

Statutory assessments under the new framework will not be available before September 2014. We are piloting the coordinate assessment process with six children and young people of varying ages and complexity of needs and will shortly pilot conversion from existing statements of SEN to EHC plans in preparation for the conversion programme to be carried out from September 2014 to April 2018.

Statutory assessment

A model process for statutory assessment and EHC planning is currently being piloted. This is a model process rather than a rigid procedure, and will need to be adapted to the specific needs and circumstances of each child/young person, their family and the configuration of services involved in their support. The principles of the SEND reform require us to move away from a rigid procedural process to a more personalised process.

The model process being piloted essentially follows the current 26 week statutory assessment process in terms of timescales and steps taken, with the addition of face to face meetings with parents, young people and the team around the young person. This model is based on that developed by some of the pathfinders. Early feedback from the pilot assessments underway is that the new timescale of 20 weeks will be challenging to achieve, and the face to face, more personal way of conducting assessments is being found really helpful by parents. Learning from the pilots will be evaluated together with feedback on this consultation paper in June 2014 to finalise the process to be followed from September 2014.

Education, health and care (EHC) plans

The plan is intended to be a single plan shared by the whole team around the young person, with the young person at its centre, and including parents and the young person as members of the team. It is proposed that this replaces and incorporates most other plans for the child or young person except (when applicable) a child protection plan, and a child in care placement plan. There may be other plans for young people that cannot appropriately be incorporated into the EHC plan, and the revised draft code of practice also suggests that this will need to be worked out on an individual basis and in consultation with young people and their families to achieve the most effective plan or set of plans for each individual.

The draft format we are piloting was designed to meet the requirements set out in the draft code of practice for SEN. There is a single format for all ages of children/young people, regardless of complexity of need and how many services are involved. The revised draft sets out new requirements which will lead to some amendment to this format, and there is learning coming from the pilot and the working groups to be incorporated also. The draft pilot EHC plan format is attached as an appendix to this paper.
Reviewing & updating EHC plans

Review is a process not a meeting. Any meeting held should be person centred, fully involving young people and their parent carers. The roles played by the young person and parent carers in review will vary depending on the age and understanding of the young person and how their views are to be represented.

The aim of the review is to review progress on the plan, consider any fresh assessments and changes to the child’s needs and ensure the plan is updated accordingly. A plan based on a statutory assessment that may have been carried out when the child was aged 2 or even younger must be reviewed at least once a year to ensure it remains fit for purpose.

The proposed review process is –

1. Key person in the education setting liaises with the young person, parent carer and SEND lead practitioner (and lead professional if not the key person in the education setting) to agree the process and any support needed
2. Update one page profile and family input to the plan with the young person and parent(s)
3. Coordinate the review process with other members of the team around the young person to ensure it is person centred, holistic and streamlined while meeting all the statutory requirements governing the young person’s single EHC plan
4. Ensure all members of the team around the young person contribute to the review in an appropriate way – not everyone necessarily needs to be at a review meeting – any updated or fresh assessments should be shared
5. Ensure any review meeting is held in a person centred way
6. Review report to the SEND lead practitioner
7. SEND lead practitioner updates the plan in discussion with SEND panel agreement as needed.

The review process will need to be tailored to the young person, their circumstances and needs and the range of services involved and legal frameworks applicable. There should be a single streamlined review process as far as possible. The pilot of conversion reviews may help to work out how this works in practice and we will need to continue to learn and refine the process over the next 3 years as statements are progressively converted to EHC plans and more new EHC plans are issued and start to be reviewed.

The review process will need to be coordinated with the review process for children in care or child protection plans where applicable. It is proposed that all other plans and reviews for a child or young person can and should be integrated with the single planning and review process where possible, although there is further work to be done on how this works in practice for a range of different circumstances. This learning and refinement will need to continue over the whole 3 year transition from the current SEN framework to EHC planning.

Decision-making

Decisions about statutory assessments, statements, placement and provision and currently made through an SEN panel. The panel now has representatives of social care and health services on a permanent basis (this was already the case on an occasional basis), which will enable the panel to make joined up decisions about education, health and care provision and funding as needed. Further work is required to align the resulting SEND panel with the early years and transition panels to achieve a coherent decision-making process for all children and young people from 0-25.

Personal budgets

There is not yet a great deal of learning about personal budgets from the pathfinder areas. Work is underway locally to develop an initial policy on personal budgets linked to EHC plans from 1st September and a programme of work over the next 1-2 years to develop a more comprehensive and integrated personal budget offer. This work is supported by In Control and National Development Team for Inclusion who have been working with some of the pathfinders to develop personal budget offers. Initially the offer is likely to be restricted to those areas where direct payments are already made, e.g. some respite care for disabled children, and those areas where it is easiest to disaggregate funding from existing commissioning arrangements and most beneficial to do so in terms of flexible and creative provision and minimising the risk to efficient high quality support provision. There are some areas of service where it is already clear from pathfinder experience that it is better to commission a service than to purchase individually, e.g. speech and language therapy.

Quality assurance

Quality assurance for EHC planning and SEN support planning will be key. Quality assurance (QA) for statementing is currently carried out by Senior Inclusion Officers in the SEN team and the SEN panel. It is envisaged that QA for EHC planning and SEN support will continue to be carried out by the SEND panels and through the role of managers, leaders and specialists within the proposed SEND service.
Preparation for adulthood

There has been considerable work on transition to adulthood for disabled young people and those with SEN over a number of years. There are a number of key elements of the existing B&NES framework for transition to adulthood, which can be built on in SEND reform as follows.

Person centred thinking underpins transition reviews and transition planning. Person centred thinking is now being embedded in EHC planning for young people at all ages, which should mean that over time young people will be prepared better and earlier to achieve their goals in preparing adulthood.

The transition protocol sets out what should be done when and by whom to prepare young people for adulthood. This provides for transition reviews from year 9 (age 14), supported by Connexions advisers, run in a person-centred way and leading to a transition plan. Learning Difficulty Assessments are carried out by Connexions advisers at 16 for young people with statements of SEN.

The protocol will be amended to reflect the changes resulting from SEND reform and incorporated into the framework for EHC planning 0-25. Transition plans will be incorporated into the EHC plan. Learning Difficulty Assessments become part of the legal framework for EHC plans from Sept 2014 as part of the SEND reform, and funding for one PA from the Connexions service will be transferred to the role of SEND Lead Practitioner from that date to take on this function in relation to statutory assessments and EHC plan reviews for young people preparing for adulthood including the transition to further education.

Information about the framework for supporting preparation for adulthood is currently set out in a local guide which will be updated to reflect SEND reform and incorporated into the local offer.

‘Getting a life’ pathways have been defined as follows, and will be embedded into the EHC plan for each young person from 14, and continue to be used as the basis for planning in transition to adulthood.

1. Employment, Education and Training
2. Independence and Housing
3. Health
4. Friendships Relationships and Community.
Transition arrangements for conversion of statements of SEN to EHC plans

It is proposed that annual reviews leading to key stage transitions will be used over a period of three and a half years from Sept 2014 to April 2018 to ‘convert’ old statements into new single EHC plans. The conversion process will be similar to but not the same as a fresh assessment.

It is envisaged that the new ways of working in SEN support will assist the conversion process where they are adopted for a young person with a statement. This will include the following –

- Establishing team around the child/young person arrangements
- CAF or social care (holistic) assessment
- A single SEN support plan including a good quality holistic one page profile drawn up with the young person
- Identification of the lead professional to coordinate delivery of planned support and act as single point of contact for the family.

If these are put in place for significant numbers of children and young people with statements of SEN prior to conversion to EHC plans there may be benefits in reducing the time taken to complete the conversion process and potentially bringing planned conversion reviews forward if the time saving is great enough.

3.4 Capacity and service delivery

The SEND lead practitioner role

We propose to create new roles of SEND lead practitioner, and senior SEND lead practitioner to replace the existing case officer and senior case officer roles within the SEN team. The number needs to be increased significantly from the current capacity to support the increased time taken by the new way of carrying out assessments and EHC planning, and in anticipation of an increase in the number of EHC plans 0-25 compared to the existing number of statements of SEN at school age.

It is proposed to create 8 SEND lead practitioner posts in total
Team work and lead roles in EHC planning

It is proposed that key roles to ensure effective EHC planning are defined as follows.

SEND lead practitioner

The key tasks of the SEND lead practitioner in relation to Education, health and Care planning will be

- Leading the statutory assessment
- Coordinating EHC planning

Leading statutory assessment

- Ensure that assessment and planning are person centred by meeting the young person and family and ensuring a good quality one page profile and family contribution to planning are completed
- Coordinate the assessment activity to ensure it is both person centred and holistic and minimising demands on the family ensuring that the assessment follows the ‘tell us once’ principle
- Draw up a single EHC plan with the young person and their family and the rest of the team around the child
- Present the draft EHC plan to the SEND panel for approval and resourcing
- Facilitate and agree arrangements for delivery of the plan including the lead professional and monitoring and review arrangements.

Coordinating EHC planning

- Provide advice and support to those delivering and reviewing the plan including the young person, parent carer(s) and the lead professional
- Maintain the central copy of the EHC plan, update it when necessary in discussion with the lead professional and the team around the child, and ensure all members of the team around the child have the latest version of the plan
- Support the review process more directly as required, for example where there are multiple and highly complex needs or significant disputes about how needs are best met
- Present the plan to SEND panel when necessary following review and updating for approval, resourcing or ending.

This is an outline of the proposed role, not an exhaustive list.

Lead professional

The lead professional role for a child or young person with a single EHC plan builds on that in early help and SEN support as follows.

The lead professional is identified from the team around the child to

- Act as a single point of contact for the child/young person and family
- Coordinate delivery of the actions agreed in the child’s support plan following assessment
- Reduce overlap and inconsistency in the services received.

The lead professional is accountable to their home agency for delivery of their lead professional role. They are not responsible or accountable for the actions of other practitioners or services.

In addition the lead professional will be responsible for reviewing the EHC plan with the support of the planning coordinator. This will include responsibility to –

- Ensure that review is person centred by meeting the young person and family and ensuring a good quality updated and age appropriate one page profile and family contribution to review are completed
- Coordinate the review process to ensure it is both person centred, holistic and streamlined while meeting all the statutory requirements governing the child/young person’s single EHC plan
- Report to the planning coordinator on the review process, progress on the plan and any updating required
- Update the plan in discussion with the planning coordinator.

This is an outline of the proposed role of lead professionals in respect of EHC plans, not an exhaustive list.
The lead professional will often be the key person for the young person in the education setting – in schools the class teacher, tutor or a teaching assistant assigned to support the young person for example. Where the lead professional is from an external agency, e.g. a social worker for a child with significant social care needs, the key person in the school and lead professional will need to work closely together to coordinate delivery of the young person’s plan.

Parent carers and young people

One of the aims of the SEND reform is to empower parent carers and young people to take leading roles in the team supporting the young person. We should support and encourage this so that parent carers and older young people may sometimes lead or facilitate their own meetings for example. The lead professional and key person in school if a different member of the team should always work closely with parent carers and young people in coordinating the work of the team, consulting about planning and review and any other decision-making relating to the young person’s plan.

Service integration

The proposal is to integrate those services currently directly provided by the Council and solely or primarily concerned with supporting disabled young people and those with SEN. Virtual/functional integration should be sought with those key services currently provided by other organisations on behalf of the LA and/or CCG. The key question for consultation is whether we believe integrating in this way will promote the wellbeing of young people and quality of provision.

The following diagram illustrates what this might look like, although the precise make-up of any integrated service and its links with other services will be determined following this consultation. The solid line surrounds those teams and roles that should be considered as a minimum for inclusion in an integrated SEND service.

In the case of early years services there are key roles in respect of SEND, in particular the area SENCOs. The early years consultant role is also critical in respect of SEND although it also provides significant support to other vulnerable groups of children without any needs arising from SEND. Both roles are shown on this diagram, however the dotted line around these roles reflects the fact they are currently within the 0-11 preventive service. This consultation paper suggests we should consider each of these roles for possible inclusion with a SEND service. However it is not proposed to make a decision on this until completion of the further consultation process on early years services which is due to start soon. This will ensure that any decision takes all relevant considerations into account. Regardless of where these roles sit – a SEND service or early years, there will need to be very close joint working between the services for those children and families who have needs that require both.

Likewise if the Disabled Children’s Team is included in a SEND service, there will need to be close joint working with the other social care teams both for those children or families that have a range of needs that may require different social care specialisms and also to ensure ‘clinical’ supervision, professional support for the social work role, management of social care capacity and workloads and other relevant matters.

The Disabled Children’s Team (DCT) and Educational Psychology Service play both preventive and statutory roles in respect of SEN. In the case of DCT their role is to provide a social care service to disabled children and young people and their families regardless of whether they have SEN or at what level of need, although the majority of young people worked with by DCT do in fact have statements of SEN. More than half of the work done by the Educational Psychology Service is preventive in early years and in school to support children and settings with strategies to ensure inclusion and generally, for children below the threshold for a statement/EHC plan. The proposed SEND service should pick up all of the roles and responsibilities currently held by the teams (including administrative) that are brought together, and should have a role across disability, prevention and SEN, and to support children and young people below the EHC planning threshold in the way these teams do now.

The creation of an integrated service in this way will ensure some of the key professional expertise required for children with additional needs (including disability) is available through a single service to underpin effective SEN support and support for disabled young people at all levels of need. We will need to evaluate the benefits and impact of these professionals contributing to a more personalised EHC planning system, alongside their contribution to SEN and disability support below this level of need as the EHC planning process beds in. For Educational Psychology we will also review the preventive offer and consider what should be the core offer and what might be available on a traded basis and whether and how this needs to differ between settings – early years, maintained schools, academies and free schools.

The learning from pathfinders indicates that collocation contributes significantly to the benefits to be achieved from integration. Alongside consideration of integration we should therefore consider whether an integrated service can be accommodated together.

The diagram also shows possible links for virtual integration with other key services. The designated medical officer and adult LD commissioning manager will both play key roles in securing coordination with children’s health and adult services respectively. We should therefore consider establishing a SEND leadership team that includes those links. Transition social worker(s) from adult care could be designated and enabled to share the SEND service base, likewise it could be beneficial to identify ways to enable key children’s health professionals who wholly or mainly work with SEND to work more closely with an integrated SEND service.

The other services are shown because all work with disabled children and young people and those with SEND, just not as their sole or primary function. Good joint working will be necessary to ensure effective team around the child/young person working to deliver EHC plans and meet all of the needs of these young people, not just those relating primarily to SEND.
Competencies for SEN support and working with EHC plans

Through the work of the SEND reform project to date we have identified the following core competencies for all practitioners in education settings and all services to work as part of the team around the young person to provide SEN support and to work with EHC plans. These apply to the whole workforce, and are generally applicable to all of our work to support vulnerable children, young people or adults, although they have been developed specifically to support the model of team and lead or integrated working to deliver person-centred EHC planning.

The training programme – introduction to SEND reform and introduction to EHC planning - that we are developing and will roll out through the summer and autumn of 2014, will seek to develop these competencies as well as knowledge of the new framework for SEND support. We are also working on a programme of training in Person Centred Thinking for the whole workforce over the next few years.

Attitudes/Behaviours

- Committed to improving the life chances of children and young people with SEN and disabled young people and have high aspirations about what is possible
- Action-orientated – focused on delivering outcomes and change
- Positive, can do approach
- Creative and flexible
- Resilient
- Commitment to partnership working with families and others
- Leading by example in using a person centred approach in all of their work
- Commitment to working and sharing information in a transparent way

Knowledge

- Clear about their role and know what their responsibilities are, where they can be creative and what is not their responsibility
• Understanding of social model of disability and how assumptions about disability lead to reduced life outcomes and therefore why raising expectations is vital
• Know what is positive and possible in the lives of young people – for example paid employment etc.
• Know what is available (for example, the local offer) and where and how to find the information that families need and local opportunities
• Know the structure and the format of the single EHC plan and what information goes where
• How person -centred meetings and reviews can contributed to single EHC plan

Skills

• Able to listen to children, young people and their families and be able to learn what is important to and what is important for a young person, and how to find a balance between the two
• Know how to listen to behaviour as well as what young people say directly
• Ability to raise aspirations in a variety of ways, conversations, sharing examples, gently challenging low expectations
• Skills to research local offer and ability to share it with families
• Are able to use person- centred thinking skills and tools including one page profiles
• Able to use information from a person-centred review to inform a single EHC plan
• Can co-ordinate contributions of other people, and use evidence to develop single EHC plans that meet the standards
• Able to write clearly, without using jargon

Examples of how this can be demonstrated

Practitioners will be able to:

• Describe the core responsibilities of their role
• Share their own one-page profile and demonstrate that it meets best practice criteria
• Share stories and examples and positive change that demonstrates what is possible and how they supported people to have high expectations
• Describe the Local Offer and how to find out further information
• Show you examples of each of the person -centred working tools and how they reflect best practice criteria
• Show you good quality single EHC plans.

3.4 Partnership arrangements

Independent information, advice and support

Local authorities will be required to ensure parent carers and young people in transition have independent information, advice and support in respect of the local offer, SEN support and EHC planning, including advocacy for young people.

This support is currently provided by Parent Partnership Service for parents within the current SEN framework. We have an advocacy service for disabled children and young people provided through Off The Record, which has been commissioned to March 2016, however this does not have sufficient capacity to provide the required advocacy service for all young people with SEN through transition.

The government has announced £30m funding nationally for independent support, however there is a duty on local authorities to commission independent advocacy for young people, and it is not yet clear how the independent support to be secured through the national funding relates to this duty. Our Parent Partnership Service (PPS) in partnership with Off The Record have successfully bid to be one of the small number of PPS nationally to help to gather evidence and develop the model for independent support so we have a real opportunity not only to develop our local thinking about this but also to share the national framework to ensure it is clear and coherent rather than adding further confusion for parent carers and young people.

It is proposed to increase the funding for advocacy through Off The Record for the 18 months from Sept 2014 to the end of the current contract both to meet the advocacy duty for that period as an extension of the existing advocacy service and also to help us and young people to co-produce a specification for the future service, based on an evaluation of demand and effectiveness of advocacy in the first year of SEND reform as well as the views of young people on how they would prefer to be independently supported. We estimate this will take an additional full time equivalent advocate, based on current service levels and the number of young people with statements of SEN who will now be eligible for advocacy in transition planning.

The Family Information Service will support our local offer information as an initial point of contact for parent carers and young people who have queries, and will signpost to PPS or advocacy as needed. It is proposed to bring together FIS, PPS, advocacy service and other services that provide independent support or advocacy for carers and disabled adults to look at how independent information, advice and support can be as coherent as possible. Parent carer and young people’s representatives should also be involved in this partnership. We will need to evaluate how these arrangements are working after the first year, considering both demand and performance, with parent carers and young people playing a key role in reviewing and designing the services so commission into the future.

Local offer framework, on-going review

This consultation paper setting out the proposed model for delivering SEND reform is therefore also a consultation on our first area-wide local offer, which needs to include the model. The proposals in this paper have come out of workstreams with parent carer representation, and some more limited consultation with young people on aspects of the reform. We cannot, and should not claim that this has been coproduced. We will therefore need to develop our partnership and participation arrangements with both parent carers and young people to ensure the local offer is fully coproduced over time. We could aim to achieve this within three years.

Partnership, governance, strategy

We should establish a partnership with representatives of parent carers, young people, early years settings, schools, colleges, education, health and care (children’s and adults) services to keep the local offer under review as required by the new framework. One way to achieve this would be to invite the Disabled Children’s Strategy Group to amend its terms of reference to cover 0-25 and take on this role, which would be an extension of the role it has played over recent years.

This SEND partnership could also involve all key partners in overseeing SEND service delivery and report to the Health and Wellbeing Board which has ultimate responsibility for partnership between the Local Authority and Clinical Commissioning Group in respect of SEND amongst other issues.

A SEND strategy could be drawn up to complete the work of SEND reform through and beyond the transition period and for review and development of the local offer including all provision for SEND 0-25. It is proposed a 3-5 year strategy be drawn up with partners to take forward all the requirements of SEND reform and the proposals within this paper.
Process, timeline, next steps, comments
The deadline for feedback on the proposals set out in this consultation paper is Friday 13th June 2014, except for the proposal to establish the SEND lead practitioner role, for which the deadline for informal consultation is Friday 30th May 2014, following which there will be a 45 day period of formal consultation as required for those current post-holders in the SEN team whose posts are directly affected by this proposal.

Those proposals also relating to the early years services will be further considered as part of the later consultation process on the future shape of that service, the deadline for which is not yet clear. Comments on these proposals are encouraged as part of this SEND reform consultation and will be collated and forwarded for consideration as part of the early years consultation also.

Views are sought on all of the proposals within this paper. Please email any comments to SEND_info@bathnes.gov.uk

Charlie Moat
Project Manager Service Improvement, lead on SEND reform project in B&NES
May 6th 2014
charlie_moat@bathnes.gov.uk
01225 477663
Links and references
Local links

There is a SEND reform webpage on the B&NES Council website which has updates on the SEND reform project in B&NES and links to other relevant webpages. This can be found at www.bathnes.gov.uk/SENDreform.

All of our working documents including the draft EHC plan, SEN support plan and local offer template are available on our SEND reform Hub page at http://thehub.bathnes.gov.uk/Services/Details/1019.

Our Facebook page is used for updates on SEND reform locally and nationally and to seek feedback and can be found at www.facebook.com/SENDreform.

We have a dedicated email address for all questions and comments about SEND reform in B&NES, including any comments on this consultation paper, at SEND_info@bathnes.gov.uk.

National links – SEND reform delivery partners

Revised draft code of practice for SEND https://www.education.gov.uk/consultations/index.cfm?action=consultationDetails&consultationId=1963&external=no&menu=1

SEND reform pathfinder programme http://www.sendpathfinder.co.uk/

Council for Disabled Children http://www.councilfordisabledchildren.org.uk/

Early Support http://www.ncb.org.uk/early-support

Preparing for Adulthood http://www.preparingforadulthood.org.uk/

In Control (development of personal budgets) http://www.in-control.org.uk/
Appendices
Draft support plan
Draft EHC plan
Local offer template